Christina Lutz is an associate in Levenfeld Pearlstein's Litigation Practice Group, where she concentrates on commercial litigation. She has represented a variety of mid-sized business entities throughout the litigation process, from inception through trial. Christina also has extensive experience in local government, tort, real estate, insurance, and employment law, representing municipalities, condominium associations, national retailers, and business entities of all sizes at the trial and appellate levels.

Throughout her practice, Christina has developed close relationships with her clients, guiding them through every step of the litigation process, continually evaluating their objectives, and teaming with them to obtain positive results.

As a law student, Christina externed for Justice Jill K. McNulty of the Illinois Appellate Court. She was also treasurer of the Black Law Students Association and a teaching assistant in contract law for two years.

Prior to her legal career, Christina worked in television in New York and Los Angeles.
