Jamie Burns is Senior Counsel in Levenfeld Pearlstein's Litigation Group. She concentrates her practice on representing lenders in commercial banking disputes, commercial foreclosures, and post-judgment collection proceedings. As part of her practice, Jamie also regularly represents secured lenders in bankruptcy proceedings initiated by their borrowers. Jamie routinely handles a variety of other litigation, including representing employers in litigation related to breaches of restrictive covenants or with respect to discrimination claims. Jamie also regularly represents landlords in commercial evictions, and condominium associations in declaratory judgment and other actions.

Jamie effectively navigates the legal issues facing her clients with strong communication skills, a commitment to responsiveness and consistent attention to detail.

Prior to joining Levenfeld Pearlstein, Jamie was an associate at another Chicago firm where she served as outside counsel to a large national bank on cases involving breach of small business loans.
